do you know:

- what constitutes emotional, physical and sexual abuse?
- what the signs are that a young person may need help?
- what to say and do if a child or youth tells you they are being harmed?
- what the law says you must do?
- how to recognize risk and create safer organizations and communities?
- what resources are available to help?

the program Tailored to meet the specific needs and interests of a group, Prevention in Motion defines different types of abuse—physical, emotional and sexual—and neglect, the indicators and the effects these can have on individuals, families and communities.

Participants gain knowledge about the barriers and benefits to preventing abuse, and learn ways to proactively build safer relationships within organizations and communities.

These full day interactive workshops also examine how to handle disclosures, the legal reporting requirements, and provide risk management tools.

The information is supported by a 78 page participant's manual, as well as videos and case statements for discussion.

the facilitator RespectED facilitators are highly trained in the field of abuse, bullying and harassment and offer the most up to date current information throughout the workshop.

the price One Day workshop fee is $70.00 per participant. Pricing includes participant resources and "Prevention in Motion" manual.
